Dear Hiring Manager,

Here is what I would bring to your Meta Ads Specialist role:

1. Meta Pixel and Conversions API set up correctly from day one, so ad performance is measured against real conversions, not just platform-reported clicks -- the difference between optimizing on real data and optimizing blind.
2. Campaign architecture built for efficient budget scaling, so ROAS holds as spend increases instead of degrading the moment you push past initial test budgets.
3. A weekly creative-testing cadence that finds the actual ROAS ceiling on an account, rather than settling for whatever the first few ad sets happen to return.

I have been running Meta Ads Manager campaigns since 2022 across cosmetics, FMCG, and fintech client accounts -- including James Trading Strategies, where I combined paid Meta spend with organic content to take Instagram, Facebook, and Twitter/X from 0 to 10,000+ followers in 7 days, then monetized that audience to $5,000+ in revenue within 30 days.

I would welcome the chance to walk through exactly how I would approach pixel setup and campaign structure in the first two weeks.

Best,
Chinwendu Marvellous Ajaegbu-Caleb
